
Yes, college is an option.

Find out how to get there from men who are there.

Members of the Brother to Brother program at St. Petersburg College are visiting schools, churches, community centers and other venues to share their experiences with young men, explaining how college has been a positive option for them.

Brother to Brother is a program designed to help African-American men stay in college until they graduate. The more than 100 men in the program have found solid footing on the road to success and, through this Community Tour, are working to help younger students do the same.

Topics of discussion:

- Education and preparation for college
- Responsibilities of fatherhood
- Financial management
- Respect
- Life skills
- Legal issues and consequences
- Positive role models
- Positive self image
- Planning for the future
